Table of Contents

Terpsichore in Jimmy Choo: A Visual Reading of Relationships between Dance and High Fashion Economies
(55,890 words)

Chapter One: Introduction 1
1.1. Locating the research focus 1
1.2. Research questions and thesis structure 8
1.3. Focused theories and data collection methods 9

Chapter Two: Corporeal Cloths: Shapes, Form and Fashion Bodies 15
2.1. Shapes and forms in fashion choreographies 18
   a) Shapes and forms in high fashion clothing 19
   b) Shapes, forms, and the fashion bodies 23
   c) Shapes and forms in fashion performance 27
2.2. Motion 37
   a) Laban movement analysis and effort theories 39
   b) Performance of the body on fashion catwalk: the art of walking 47
2.3. Conclusion 58

Chapter Three: Tracing Terpsichore: Visual Taxonomies of Fashion, Fabrics and Choreography of Modern Dance 61
3.1. Loïe Fuller and dynamic flow 63
   3.1.1. Loïe Fuller 64
   3.1.2. Nick Knight’s Dynamic Blooms (2011) 68
   3.1.3. Stephen Galloway’s Fred and Ginger (2011) 75
3.2. Martha Graham and tensile elasticity 80
   3.2.1. Lamentation (1930) 80
   3.2.2. Gustavo Papleo’s Strike A Pose (2009) 83
   3.2.3. Mark Pillai’s Feel the Power (2010) 86
3.3. Merce Cunningham and experimental Body Shapes in Space

3.3.1. Scenario (1997) 92
3.3.2. Strike A Pose (2009): revisited 101
3.3.3. Mario Sorrenti’s Beautiful Stranger (2012) 105

3.4. Conclusion 112

Chapter Four: God Saves the (Mc)Queen: Appropriation of Punk Aesthetics in a Crossover between Dance and Fashion

4.1. Fashion industry and seasonal politics 117
4.2. Punk aesthetics and the appropriation of punk 122
4.3. The case of Deliverance (2003) 129
4.4. Politics of the merry-go-round?: punk and commercial gains 153
4.5. Conclusion 158

Chapter Five: Terpsichore or a Mannequin?: Popularisation of the Crossover and Its Transformation to Mainstream

5.1. Artistic collaboration and its transaction for socio-economic exchange 165
5.2. Commodity relations in corporate art interventions 177
   a) The case of Shimmer (2004) 179
   b) The case of The Dying Swan (2009) 180
5.3. Conclusion 185

Chapter Six: Concluding Pointes 188

Bibliography 199
Acknowledgements

Carrie Bradshaw, a protagonist from the televised and films series Sex and the City (1998 - 2010) once said there are two types of families: the one we were born into and the one we socially construct. Embarking upon this doctoral journey, my ‘family’ has grown and provided me tremendous support which I highly and sincerely value. This family includes:

My sister, Dr. Wila-sini Wongkaew, who continues to assist my academic intellect and has never stopped delivering great moral support;

My brother, Dr. Kamaiton Wongkaew, and the bank of mom and dad, Dr. Wongchan and Dr. Apichat Wongkaew, who have provided financial support throughout the course of my education;

My supervisors, Prof. Sherril Dodds, Prof. Rachel Fensham, and Dr. Melissa Blanco Borelli, you are a co-performer, academic mentors, and a friend, who has never stopped nurturing me intellectually and, most importantly, never given up on me when at times I have given up on myself;

Tim Foskett, Dennis Carney, Alfred Hurst, Jeff Tee and everybody at PACE, GMFA and Terrence Higgins Trust, you are my nurturing parents and the greatest mentors in the University of Life who have provided unwavering support and a life-changing curriculum;

Ann Henderson and Nigel Biggs for inspiration and career support;

Dr. Jean-Johnson Jones, Dr. Kathy Milazzo, Dr. Stefania Mylona, Dr. Lise Uytterhoeven, Eva Aymami, Davide Camorani and everybody else at the Registry, Library, the Researcher Development Programme, and International office for their technical support as well as academic input towards this research;

PoP Moves, Society of Dance History Scholars (SDHS), Performance Studies International (PSi), and Interdisciplinary.net for academic and publishing platforms;

Dr. Dawn Wilkinson, Dr. Emma Thompson, Dr. Daniel West and everybody at St Mary’s Hospital for the greatest medical support; without you, I would not have been able to complete my thesis; and finally, Gruff Rees, Robert Nicholson, Hannell Him, Momoko Satake and Julie Ann Minnai for your invaluable friendship.

Whether you are my closest blood siblings or my furthest distant relatives in my divine line of family tree, thank you.

I would also like to thank myself for not giving up and continuing to learn and grow along this professional and personal development. And for those who are about to or have already commenced this journey, be it academic, social or spiritual, please always remember that you are not alone. Never give up and let us all “shine bright like a diamond” (Rihanna 2012).

In loving memory of Dr. Apichat Wongkaew (1936-2007), a beloved father, a great teacher and a tactile friend. You may never stand beside me and see me in my doctoral gown, but you will always live in me. I will pass on your knowledge, re-live your philosophy, and carry on your legacy. And most of all, I hope I have made you proud.